Couple dead in Trimble self-inflicted shootings

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

A married couple in Trimble County is dead after an apparent double suicide Thursday at their Ogden Ridge Road home, about 5 miles from Bedford.

According to Kentucky State Police, Christen Bell, 45, and Christopher Bell, 45, both died of apparent self-inflicted gunshot wounds.

Christopher Bell operated Chris Bell Concrete of Bedford and Christen Bell worked at the Fastlane BP in Milton.

Police were responding to a possible domestic violence call involving Christopher Bell and other family members at a nearby home on Ogden Ridge Road Thursday when they were unable to make contact with anyone in the Christopher and Christen Bell household.

The KSP Special Response Team was dispatched to the scene and upon forcing entry into the Christopher and Christen Bell home found a female dead from a gunshot wound and a male still alive and breathing but critically wounded.

Christen Bell was dead at the scene while Christopher Bell died either en route to or soon after arriving at Carroll County Memorial Hospital.

"From what I am told, there was an altercation at a family member's home but there were no serious injuries at that time. But that's when police were called to the scene," said Matt Sudduth, public information officer for Post 5 at Campbellsburg.

Sudduth said Christopher Bell apparently returned to his home before officers arrived to find "the lights were on in the house but nobody would answer the door and there was no contact with anybody inside.

"The detective believes the shooting was a double suicide and no autopsy will be ordered," Sudduth added. "There were plenty of facts to substantiate that at the scene, including a very detailed suicide note."

Sudduth said Christopher Bell had apparently taken pills in an attempt to commit suicide earlier in the day and had been treated at Carroll County Memorial Hospital. Hospital staff sought to admit him at that time but he refused and left the emergency room.

After returning home, Christopher Bell apparently went to the family member's home nearby and engaged in a verbal and physical altercation that led to the initial call for police. During that altercation a family member was cut on the arm and another was struck.

Jackie Maddox, a longtime co-worker with Christen Bell at Fastlane BP, said she had been text-messaging her friend all day Thursday since getting a text from Christen that Christopher had taken a "bunch of pills" and they were at the hospital.

Maddox said the last text she got from Christen Bell said they were home and that she was "letting him sleep it off."

However, at some point Christopher Bell went next door to the family member's home and the altercation took place. After he left there, but before police arrived, is apparently when the shootings took place.

Maddox and co-workers were saddened by the death of their friend as were Fastlane BP customers who were used to interacting with Christen Bell at the business.

"She was a wonderful person who liked to make everybody laugh. She cared about everybody and her two grandchildren she loved so much," said Maddox, who knew them both. "He was a hard worker who took pride in his work. He was very compassionate and very protective of his family."

The incident is being investigated by Kentucky State Police.

Courtney looks ahead

Transition moves underway for new mayor

Bob Courtney, who will be sworn in Monday as Madison's 36th elected mayor, works with two of his supervisors on finishing touches for the plans he already has started to implement. Mindy McGee (left), the new chief of staff, and Nichole Schell, the city's preservation planner, are part of Courtney's team. (Courier staff photo by Mark Campbell)

Courier staff writer

He will take the oath of office Monday as Madison's mayor for the next four years, but Bob Courtney hit the ground running Oct. 14 when he was sworn in to fill the unexpired term of Damon Welch.

Now, as he focuses on the nitty-gritty details of the transition to become the city's 36th elected mayor, he is restructuring some departments and making personnel changes to try to see his campaign priorities — public safety, economic opportunity and quality of life — become reality.

Courtney promised Oct. 14 when he was sworn in that he would focus on the unfinished iniatives from Welch's tenure and not move forward with his own "until after the voters decide." He went on to win the Nov. 5 election 2,284 to 1,488 over Democratic challenger Julie Berry. That, he said recently, made him believe voters were signaling him they wanted to see his plans realized.

As January nears with his goal of having "a plan in place by the middle of the month," he said this week he wants to "make sure we're prioritizing ourselves to have intentional outcomes. Let's eliminate chance."

Courtney, whose background is in private business with large companies and who has degrees in business administration, recently outlined his plans, which he already has shared with city supervisory employees. Those plans include four newly created supervisory job descriptions and two supervisory positions that will undergo a change in direction. The city has about 100 employees now and the restructuring will not significantly change the total number, although it could move some of the positions.

The two supervisory positions that will undergo a change in direction involve what has been the Building Inspection Department and the Madison Police Department.

An opening has been posted on the city's website for the position of chief of police. Jeremey Perkins, the chief now, remains in the position, and Courtney said he is welcome to apply. Building Inspector Mark Johnson has left his job with the city.

The ad posted for the chief of police outlines the responsibilities as well as experience and education required and emphasizes short- and long-range strategic goal-setting. Courtney said Major Ben McKay, the assistant chief, as well as Perkins, would be considered for the job if they decide to apply. He said he also plans to use his statutory authority to waive the requirement of five years of experience in MPD to help with recruitment if the next chief does not come from within the department.

At full staffing, Madison's police department has 29 officers, a number that includes the chief and others whose rank may be other than patrol officer. Right now, 24 positions are filled with officers on the job because some candidates are in training or waiting to enter.

"What I want the public to know is we take community safety as the highest priority,"

Tourism dollars increase to fuel more for 2020

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

With proceeds from the county's 2019 Innkeepers Tax almost 24% over last year, the Visit Madison Inc. and Jefferson County Tourism boards met earlier this week and approved a 17% increase in Visit Madison's budget for 2020, including startup money to revive a spring music festival and money to fund tourism office improvements.

The Innkeepers Tax collected $345,603.87 from January through November in 2018 but is well above that pace this year with $427,786.30 already collected through November. The money is from a 5% tax levied on all guest rooms at the dozens of motels, hotels, bed and breakfasts and other lodging facilities in the county.

The 23.8% increase will allow Visit Madison to increase its annual budget from $392,306.50 in 2019 to $415,6489.00 in 2020 in the hope that by reinvesting in events, marketing and infrastructure, the county can continue growing an industry that draws thousands of tourists to the area annually to stay overnight, shop and eat locally, and enjoy the dozens of events co-sponsored by Visit Madison.

One of those events involves a rebranding and refocusing of the financially struggling former RiverRoots music and folk festival that had been a two-day event in either May or June annually the last 14 years. The tourism board has budgeted $40,000 to prime the pump for a relaunch with some changes in format.

Salvation Army Red Kettle drive falls short

Courier staff report

The Salvation Army is still about 35% short on its $120,000 Red Kettle Campaign goal for 2019.

"We really need local residents to help put us over the top," Lt. Justin Hartley said Friday.

Red Kettle is the major fundraiser to support Salvation Army programs and services throughout the year, Hartley said.

"This year's $120,000 goal covers a third of our operating budget and it's vital to our sustainability. Currently, we are only at about 65% of that goal and we are in desperate need of donations to help us reach the finish line," Hartley said. "We really need local residents to help put us over the top," Hartley said.

Donations can be dropped off or mailed to The Salvation Army at 331 E Main St, or made online at www.samadison.org

State Salvation Army headquarters in Indianapolis said Friday that Red Kettle donations were down across the state, but encouraged late-December donations to help ensure programs continue into next year. They emphasized that donations can be made to help a single county, community, facility or program.

Two Southern Indiana judges now reinstated

Indiana

JEFFERSONVILLE — Two Southern Indiana judges suspended over disciplinary matters have been reinstated. Clark County Circuit Court No. 2 Judge Brad Jacobs and Crawford Circuit Judge Sabrina Bell were reinstated to the bench Monday after a 30-day suspension that took effect Nov. 22. Clark County Circuit Court No. 1 Judge Andrew Adams remains on suspension until Jan. 13. The suspension was part of a disciplinary action taken by the Indiana Supreme Court in response to misconduct by the judges May 1 while in Indianapolis for a judicial conference. The three judges engaged in a verbal-turned-physical fight with two men in a parking lot after a night of drinking; Adams and Jacobs were ultimately shot during the altercation. They underwent emergency surgery and were placed on medical leave to recover. In June, Adams was charged criminally for his participation in the fight at which time he was suspended from the bench, pending the case. He later pleaded to a misdemeanor for battery. Brandon Kaiser, the suspect police say shot the gun, is facing eight felonies and six misdemeanors; he has a jury trial scheduled for Jan. 13 in Marion Superior Court. The second suspect, Alfredo Vazquez, previously pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor for battery.

Warm weather closes Paoli Peaks temporarily

PAOLI — A southern Indiana ski resort has temporarily closed its slopes amid unseasonably warm weather that's melting its artificial snowpack. Paoli Peaks said Wednesday in a tweet that it was closing its slopes and tubing park beginning Thursday until cold air returns and "we have the opportunity to make additional snow." The resort recorded a record high of 69 degrees on Wednesday amid the region's early winter warm spell. Paoli Peaks has long used machines to mix water and compressed air to make artificial snow to supplement natural snowfall. But the temperature must be at 30 degrees or lower for the process to work. Paoli Peaks typically offers skiing, snowboarding and snow tubing each year from mid-December to mid-March.

Officials investigate fatal shooting of bald eagle

BEDFORD — State conservation officers are investigating the deadly shooting of a bald eagle in southern Indiana and offering a reward to anyone with information. The investigation began last week after a landowner notified a Lawrence County animal control officer and officials with the Brown County Indiana Raptor Center of an injured bird. It had suffered an apparent gunshot wound and was treated for injuries but died, officials said. "When I found it, it was on the ground, its wing was obviously broken," Lola Nicholson, the animal control officer, told The (Bedford) Times-Mail. "You could tell immediately it had been shot. It was wheezing, so that told me it had blood in its lung cavity." Authorities are seeking help from the public for any information and offered a $1,000 reward. The birds are no longer endangered but remain protected by two federal laws. Under the Bald and Golden Eagle Protection Act, a first offense of killing a bald eagle can bring up to a year in prison and a $100,000 fine. The other law is the Migratory Bird Treaty Act.

House fire claims life in Henry County

PLEASUREVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A man was found dead inside a home that burned, Kentucky State Police said Friday. Investigators do not suspect foul play in the death of James Bullion, 67, of Pleasureville in Henry County, state police said in a news release. The fire was reported around 6 a.m. Tuesday, and Bullion's body was found inside after the fire was extinguished, the release said. The cause of the fire remained under investigation.

First charter school in Kentucky rejected

NEWPORT — The first charter school application filed in Kentucky has been unanimously denied, leaving the state to likely go another year without charter schools since being approved by the General Assembly in 2017. Newport Independent Schools rejected the application from the proposed River Cities Academy on Thursday night, news outlets reported. A review committee including 32 public school educators, administrators and experts reportedly examined the 1,062-page application. A "lack of competency" to support students with special needs, "significant plagiarism in the application process," unclear transportation plans and a lack of authentic evidence of community support played a role in the committee's rejection, according to news outlets. Superintendents from other districts in northern Kentucky reportedly opposed the charter school at a public forum Dec. 18.

Mental Health Partners of Hancock bridging the gap for county inmates

By BEN MIDDLEKAMP
(Greenfield) Daily Reporter

Kim Hall carries a coat and some clothes into the Hancock County Jail to distribute to a prisoner. (Greenfield Daily Reporter staff photo by Tom Russo)

GREENFIELD — Three years ago, a young woman walked into Kim Hall's office needing help. She had been released from jail hours earlier, leaving with no belongings or a place to sleep that night.

Hall, executive director of Mental Health Partners of Hancock County, quickly connected her to local resources. From her office in the Memorial Building downtown, she told the young woman about the Kenneth Butler Memorial Soup Kitchen nearby. She also gave the woman clothing and personal care items and directed her where to find a job. The woman later found a friend to stay with for the night.

"It got me to thinking about how many other people need this help," Hall said. "When they get out (of jail) at midnight, where are they going? If they don't have a ride, what's happening to them?"

Since that chance meeting with the woman in 2016, Hall started Mental Health Partners' advocate/navigator program. She meets with clients after they're released from the Hancock County Jail and on their way to probation, work release or a recovery house as well as people who are currently incarcerated.

Hall has met with about 25 people over the past few years. Some have gone on to recovery houses or secured jobs. The woman from 2016 now lives in Indianapolis, has a job and is doing well, she said.

After an inmate agrees to be a client of Hall's, she begins meeting with them weekly, shifting the frequency of visits to once a month and later to once a quarter. When she talks with inmates, Hall asks them about their highest level of schooling and if they want to continue their education.

They also discuss life issues. Many have little to no family support, she said. Some have told her that they're "the black sheep of my family" or a "horrible person."

"I'm not a counselor, but when you're in the room and you've got somebody that's not in orange and not in brown, you're going to talk to that person," Hall said. "I'm here to help you. I will never lie to you, and I don't want you to ever lie to me. I want to trust them because they've lost trust in others."

Mental Health Partners' connection with the county's criminal justice program stretches back years.

When the heroin protocol program began in 2016, Hall wrote grants to secure funding to pay for the initial fee for a bed in a recovery house as well as money for bedding, food and personal care items for clients — totaling close to $23,000 since 2016. She's been able to secure grant funding through the Hancock County Community Foundation and also Neighborhoods Against Substance Abuse. This past May, the Hancock County Council agreed to give $10,000 to the organization for 2019.

Once her clients are released from jail and transition to a recovery house, work release, probation or go back to everyday life, Hall gathers personal items for them, such as bedding, shampoo, soap and toothbrushes. She also uses a voucher at Hancock Hope House's thrift store to give them clothing, and she provides them with shoes from Changing Footprints, a Rush County organization.

Hall also connects her clients with doctor's appointments, counseling and addictions services and local organizations like Hancock County LINK, which supports those seeking post-secondary education.

Angie Lyon, program coordinator at the Hope House and a board member with Mental Health Partners, said not only does the shelter and thrift store provide clothes, it also helps some of Hall's clients secure housing, whether that's a recovery house, a bed at the shelter or an apartment.

Lyon, who's also apart of a "mental health roundtable" organized by the Hancock County Probation Department, said she has a personal passion to work to lower the recidivism rate of those in jail.

"I believe that if we can impact them in a positive way, we can hopefully stop some of the issues and curb the multi-generational effect that it has," Lyon said.

Over the past several months, Hall has been meeting with Cody Clark in the county jail. Clark has been incarcerated for eight months on charges of operating a vehicle while intoxicated and a probation violation. Earlier in December, Clark left jail and moved to Hancock County Community Corrections.

Clark said in addition to his tangible needs, such as clothes and help with doctor's appointments, he's been able to "vent" to Hall about his personal and family struggles. Clark's father has had several strokes this year and is now in a nursing home, so he hasn't been able to see his father.

"You can't trust nobody back in the block to open up to, especially if it's real-life stuff," Clark said. "They have their own stuff going on. I trust (Hall) more than any other person that's come through (the jail.)"

Clark said he has more time to find a job thanks to Hall; she knows community resources, so he doesn't have to spend as much time seeking those out. And while he's unsure about his next steps, Clark, who earned a high school diploma, said he's thought about going to barber school. He learned how to cut hair while in jail, all with a razor. Clark also has the support of his mother, Amy Clark, who drives him to appointments and regularly visited him during his eight months in jail.

Amy Clark said it was difficult to support her son when he was in jail at the same time her husband is in a nursing home. She's grateful someone like Hall met with him when she didn't have the time.

"I see so many people saying, 'oh, they're addicts, just let them kill themselves.' No," she said, emphatically. "I'm a mom. And yeah, he's dumped on me several times, but he's still my son."

Hall said when a client of hers walks through her office doors seeking advice and resources after getting out of jail, like Clark, she feels appreciated — and she'll quickly figure out what they need to succeed.

"To me that means that meant something to them," Hall said, "that I've been helping them and they're not giving up and they want me to continue to help them because they want success in their life and they're done with their jail life."

The chart above is the transition team planning document that Bob Courtney has used in outlining the steps that need to be taken to accomplish his campaign goals.

Madison's new mayor quickly moves on plans, changes

Courtney said.

He said the city's police officers were promised a 10% salary increase and the first half of that increase will begin in January with the second half likely in March. In Courtney's campaign material, he listed among his goals foot patrols, increased uniform and investigative presence, the addition of a hilltop substation and the establishment of a competititve pay structure to recruit and retain officers. As he reflected this week on the staffing, Courtney said he is concerned about whether MPD has enough officers and noted he is "not opposed to adding officers."

Brian Martin, a local contractor on projects including the renovation of The Elks Lodge and the Mad Paddle Brewery, will head what was formerly called Building Inspection, now to be Building & Design.

As part of Courtney's campaign, he listed under quality of life issues to "overhaul Historic District Ordinance and Board of Review Process; establish a more proactive approach to supporting preservation efforts and leverage PACE (Preservation and Community Enhancement) grant dollars." In addition, he supported "establishment of property maintenance standards, enforcement of the zoning ordinance to eliminate blight and strengthening the nuisance ordinance to attract/protect the right investment in the right places."

The plans also include adding two new offices — Economic Development and Chief of Staff — although the salaries for the actual positions are already allocated in the budget.

Courtney has publicly advocated for the city to take control of its economic development planning and work with the Jefferson County Industrial Development Corporation on projects outside the city but with potential impact for the city. To accomplish that task, he is bringing Matt Wirth, who has been director of the JCIDC, into the city to head its effort.

In its 2019 budget the city allocated more than $100,000 for economic development efforts including JCIDC salary for Wirth, support staff and professional services. Those expenses are allocated in the 2020 budget from the city's share of the revenue generated from local income taxes.

"By not extending the JCIDC contract for professional services, moving Matt Wirth to report to me as the lead economic developer, we can realign economic development to work more synergistically with planning, building and design, redevelopment commission and economic development commission," Courtney said. "This also allows JCIDC to reorganize itself to be more strategic and focused on new business attraction that complements Madison and Jefferson County businesses."

Mindy McGee is the new chief of staff. She will oversee human resources, compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act, financial planning for the city and special projects. McGee will take over the long-term financial oversight and planning that had been handled by Bob Cooke, who will move to the office of Clerk/Treasurer Rick Berry. McGee has been an HR specialist, payroll and benefits and administrative assistant to the founder and chief executive officer of Sign-post Inc.; an HR learning and development team coordinator for First Financial Bank, and served in various roles for Irwin Union Bank. She is a former chair of the Jefferson County Republican Party.

Hannah Fagen will be director of the Community Relations Office and oversee, in Courtney's words, "public information, transparency efforts and relationships with community stakeholders." She is now a field representative and special projects coordinator for the office of Trey Hollingsworth, the Republican representative from Indiana's 9th Congressional District. Fagen is a 2013 Huntington University graduate with a bachelor of arts degree in political science with an emphasis on pre-law. She previously has worked with the Indiana House of Representatives and as a statewide field director for U.S. Senate campaigns, handling recruitment, organization, research and community engagement. She is a resident of Madison.

Andrew Forrester was community relations director for much of Welch's tenure as mayor. Courtney defeated Forrester in the mayoral primary and Forrester resigned in September to become Gov. Eric Holcomb's director of intergovernmental affairs.

Brian Martin, who will head the newly-established Building & Design department, will be involved in the building and planning department and design of special projects. He is a 1996 graduate of Ball State University College of Architecture & Planning with degrees in architecture and environmental planning. He has been self-employed in the design/build construction business since 1996 and moved to Madison in 1998. He has built numerous custom-design homes and is a major contractor in historic preservation and restoration projects. He served on the Venture Out Business Center Board and City of Madison PACE program committee.

Nichole Schell, who has worked extensively on major city projects including Stellar Madison and the PACE grants, will remain the city's preservation planner but an additional preservation planner will be hired using existing available grant funds. Courtney said this will enable Schell to concentrate on the city's larger projects and add someone to deal with much of the day-to-day work.

Employees who will remain in the same positions although the scope or responsibility of their departments may change as the new administration evolves include:

- Aviation Director — Brent Spry
- Fire Chief — Bill DeVries
- Mayor's Assistant — Tammy Acosta
- Parks Director — David Stucker
- Street Superintendent — Tony Sorrells
- Utilities Director — Brian Jackson

Joe Jenner of the Jenner Pattison Law Firm will remain the city's legal counsel, but he is not a city employee.

director, the festival — now called RiverJam — will be a one-day event at the City of Madison's Bicentennial Park on Saturday, June 13, featuring a mixed genre of music with local and regional bands as well as a headline performer she promises will be "a known act that people can get excited about."

"It will be more of a variety of music from the roots-like music we've seen in the past to country/pop — a mix of genres that should have something for everyone and appeal to a wider audience," Thomas said. Although a headliner has not yet been signed, Thomas said negotiations are underway and the hope is to secure the headliner sooner rather than later so Visit Madison can announce its lineup and start promoting the event, signing co-sponsors and offering ticket pre-sales.

Visit Madison has paid off some of the debt left by RiverRoots when festival attendance and gate receipts slid in recent years — the event was hindered by poor weather — and put up the $40,000 so that RiverJam can sign performers strong enough to succeed. The hope is that with the startup money, strong ticket pre-sales and continued volunteer support to help stage the event, a cash infusion can put RiverJam on a more self-sustaining path like Ribberfest in August.

"The event was organized beautifully in the past but its wristband sales have slid," Thomas said. "The sooner we can make that (lineup) announcement, the sooner we can do pre-sale tickets. They've never been in a position to lock in an entertainer this early to start selling tickets early. We truly believe that the level of entertainers you can lock in with $40,000 will help do that and maybe get some sponsors, too."

In other budget increases, Visit Madison upped its office expenses by 40% for 2020 to help pay for capital improvements related to a reorganization and expansion of tourism's space shared with the Jefferson County Historial Society Museum.

Thomas said the money will buy new desks — the one's used now were re-purposed from a different era than the needs of modern office equipment — as well as painting, carpet cleaning and storage space for some of the props and other materials used at events throughout the year.

Visit Madison will also increase its marketing budget for 2020 to try to keep visitors coming back and attract new visitors and events to grow tourism in the future. The marketing budget in 2019 was $265,806 and $272,049 has been earmarked for 2020.

In addition to board members whose terms are expiring, the board agreed to convert two formerly ex-officio positions — one from the Madison Chautauqua Festival of Art and the other from the Madison Ribberfest — to full voting positions.

Thomas said giving voting power to the formerly advisory/liaison positions gives each festival more influence on the board but also carries a great deal of responsibility to serve tourism as a whole rather than just an individual event.

"They have to be a board member for all of tourism and be part of the decision-making for everything," Thomas noted.

Street vacuuming to be out last time

The City of Madison Street Department will run the leaf vacs one more week because of the warm weather. The vacs will run the week of Jan. 6-10.

The department asks that people call in their address so the department can know exactly where there still are leaf piles.

If there are leaf piles near your address, please call 812-265-8304 and let the Street Department know your address as soon as possible.

This will be the final run so anything after Jan. 10, will have to be bagged for weekly compost pickup.

Many of the local squads will compete in competitions starting next month with an eye toward bringing home some hardware to their respective school.

Jaguars hope to avoid another slow start in finale vs. Colts

By MARK LONG
AP Sports Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The Jacksonville Jaguars are making a few tweaks for their season finale against Indianapolis. They're probably long overdue.

But given the way Jacksonville has struggled early in games, coach Doug Marrone felt he had to do something — anything, really — to change the team's fortune.

"I think we have some things we're planning this week to try to mix it up," quarterback Gardner Minshew said. "At this point, we're kind of throwing (stuff) on the wall, seeing what sticks and hopefully we'll get it figured out and we'll get rolling."

The Jaguars (5-10) have been outscored 108-22 in the first half over their past seven games, a series of woeful starts that have resulted in six double-digit losses and left Marrone needing to convince owner Shad Khan he deserves a chance to fix his mess without overbearing personnel chief Tom Coughlin. Coughlin was identified as the franchise's biggest problem and fired last week.

Marrone was left with two games to prove he's the right man in charge. Jacksonville responded by falling behind 14-0 at Atlanta last week — another ugly start — before Minshew even touched the ball. The Jaguars never recovered, an all-too-familiar script for Marrone.

"I understand this business," he said. "I understand what my job is. It's to win games, and when you don't do that, then you've got to be able to accept whatever the consequences are, which I think that I've always been a realist.

"I've never ducked things or anything. Again, it doesn't go like an inner feeling of, 'Oh, I didn't have this,' or, 'I didn't have that.' It goes more to, 'I let a lot of people down.' That's how I look at it. If you're in this profession and you don't understand that, you probably shouldn't be in this profession."

Marrone probably can't afford another embarrassing loss to end another dismal season in Jacksonville. He's 22-28 in three seasons and has dropped 20 of his past 27 games.

Talent is a huge issue, but Jacksonville also leads the NFL in penalties and has looked unprepared at times. Slow starts have been the most glaring issue in November and December, with the Jags falling behind in every game.

It's unclear what changes are in store against the Colts. Take the ball? More scripted plays? Some trickery?

Nothing should be too risky given Marrone's status and Jacksonville's losing ways.

Indianapolis (7-8) was leading the AFC South and had just beaten Jacksonville by 20 points in mid-November before losing four straight and falling out of playoff contention. The Colts ended their skid last week by crushing Carolina 38-6 and now can finish .500 or better for the seventh time in the past eight years.

"It's just the momentum that you take with that into the offseason training, into next season," Indy quarterback Jacoby Brissett said. "That's our primary focus. We have a great opportunity to do it."

NOTHING MEANINGLESS

Colts coach Frank Reich has made one thing clear since his team was eliminated from the playoffs by New Orleans on "Monday Night Football" on Dec. 16: There's nothing meaningless about finishing this season with back-to-back wins and avoiding their second losing season in three years.

TIGHTER GRIP

Since Minshew returned to Jacksonville's starting lineup, he's kept a much tighter grip on the football.

Minshew lost seven of 11 fumbles in his first eight starts. His lack of ball security was one reason Marrone went back to Nick Foles after Foles returned from a broken left collarbone. But since Minshew replaced Foles, he's only put the ball on the ground once, and Jacksonville recovered. He hasn't fumbled in three consecutive games.

"Just a new focus to it," Minshew said. "Just learning (that) guys get on you a lot quicker. They're longer, they're faster. In college, it feels like you have a little bit more time then you do here, so just getting a better feel for that I feel like has helped."

DOUBLING UP

Pro Bowl linebacker Darius Leonard and running back Nyheim Hines were part of last season's draft class, and on Sunday they can each join exclusive clubs.

Hines needs five receptions to surpass Hall of Famer Marshall Faulk for No. 2 among Colts running backs in their first two seasons. Faulk caught 108 passes in 1994 and 1995.

Leonard needs 12 tackles to surpass Jerrell Freeman (289) for the most by a Colts player in his first two NFL seasons. And Leonard has missed five games during that span.

QUENTON QUESTION

Colts Pro Bowl left guard Quenton Nelson has not missed a game since being selected No. 6 overall in the 2018 draft. His streak could end this week. Nelson spent the week in the concussion protocol.

Ranked teams meet as Kentucky hosts Louisville

3 Louisville (11-1) vs. 19 Kentucky (8-3)

Rupp Arena, Lexington, Kentucky; Saturday, 3:45 p.m.

BOTTOM LINE: Two ranked teams battle as No. 3 Louisville visits No. 19 Kentucky in a non-conference showdown. Louisville has one win and zero losses against ranked opponents this season, while Kentucky has lost its only game against a ranked team.

SUPER SENIORS: Louisville has relied heavily on its seniors. Jordan Nwora, Dwayne Sutton, Steven Enoch and Ryan McMahon have combined to account for 67 percent of the team's scoring this year and 78 percent of all Cardinals points over the team's last five games.

KEY FACILITATOR: Ashton Hagans has accounted for 56 percent of all Kentucky field goals over the last three games. The sophomore guard has 18 field goals and 24 assists in those games.

SHARING THE BURDEN: Kentucky is a perfect 5-0 when at least four of its players score 10 or more points. The team is 3-3 when fewer than four Wildcats players score in double-figures.

STREAK STATS: Kentucky has won its last six home games, scoring an average of 77.3 points while giving up 59.2.

GETTING DEFENSIVE: Louisville has held opposing teams to 35 percent shooting from the field this year, the third-lowest percentage among all Division I teams. Over their last five games, the Cardinals have held opposing shooters to 33.2 percent.

Reds, lefty Miley agree to 2-year, $15 million contract

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI — The Reds added to their already deep starting pitching Wednesday, Dec. 18 by finalizing a $15 million, two-year contract with Wade Miley that adds a left-hander to their rotation.

Miley

The 33-year-old will get $6 million in 2020 and $8 million the following year. Cincinnati has a $10 million club option for 2022 with a $1 million, and Miley can earn $500,000 annually in performance bonuses based on innings: $50,000 each for 140, 150, 160 and 170, and $100,000 apiece for 180, 190 and 200.

He joins a rotation that includes All-Stars Luis Castillo and Sonny Gray, along with Trevor Bauer and Anthony DeSclafani. Bauer came from Cleveland last July as part of the deal for outfielder Yasiel Puig and head into the final year of his contract.

"We felt it was important to add more innings and depth to the pitching staff, and as a left-hander he will be a great complement to our existing group," president of baseball operations Dick Williams said.

It's the Reds' second notable offseason deal. Former Brewers second baseman Mike Moustakas got a $64 million, four-year deal to fill the Reds' hole at second base and upgrade an offense that was near the bottom of the NL in runs last season.

Miley went 14-6 with a 3.98 ERA in 33 starts for the American League champion Houston Astros last season. He made only one appearance in the playoffs, giving up three runs in 2 2/3 innings in a Division Series loss to Tampa Bay.

The left-hander had a rough September as well. He went 1-2 in five starts and lasted only 11 1/3 innings overall. He gave up 28 hits and 21 runs in the month.

Miley made $5 million last season in base salary and performance bonuses.

Miley was an All-Star in 2012. He's 85-82 career with a 4.23 ERA in nine seasons with Arizona (2011-14), Boston (2015), Seattle (2016), Baltimore (2016-17), Milwaukee (2018) and Houston.

Torrance steps down as Shawe volleyball coach

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Tim Torrance is stepping down as head volleyball coach at Shawe Memorial High School, the school announced on Monday.

Torrance, who coached the Hilltoppers for three years after two years as junior varsity coach, will remain with the school as head varsity softball coach, a position he has held for the past five years.

Torrance took over the Shawe volleyball program after Mike Armstrong resigned. Over the next three years, the Hilltoppers went 19-54 as Torrance slowly rebuilt the program and won several games in a sectional tournament that featured state powerhouses Christian Academy of Indiana and Trinity Lutheran.

"Tim stepped up in a big way when he elected to take over as the head coach of the high school's volleyball team and has since done a wonderful job building the program into what it is today," Shawe athletic director Jamison Bower said. "Mr. Torrance is a great coach and an even better person. Shawe is extremely fortunate to have him as a member of our schools and a leader of our student-athletes. We wish him the very best moving forward and we are excited to continue our relationship with him for many years to come."

Improving Lady Hilltoppers fall at Crothersville, 80-40

sports@madisoncourier.com

Shawe Memorial posted its second-highest scoring game of the season in an 80-40 loss at Crothersville on Monday in girls basketball.

The Hilltoppers, who previously scored 41 points in a win over Medora, got 16 points and eight rebounds from Grace McAllister and 11 points and five rebounds from Calli Alderman. Phoebe Grote added eight points and Abigail Hill scored six for Shawe.

"We are playing much better. We had 13 turnovers, which is a low for the season and third game in a row the number has decreased," Shawe coach Terry King said. "We had a season-high shot attempts and therefore are improving on offense. Not one of our better defensive games, but we kept the ball out of the lane. We need to close better on shooters."

Shawe, now 1-8 on the season, hosts its own tournament on Jan. 4. The Hilltoppers will face Rock Creek in the opener.

UCLA women stay unbeaten in 68-58 road win at Indiana

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — UCLA responded to a demand for staunch defense and relentless rebounding.

However it was Michaela Onyenwere's steady second-half scoring that proved too much for Indiana to overcome on Sunday.

The junior forward scored 19 of her game-high 25 points after halftime and No. 10 UCLA stayed unbeaten with a 68-58 road win over the 12th-ranked Hoosiers.

"Obviously the reality is I have Michaela and they don't," Bruins coach Cori Close said. "That's the big X-factor."

UCLA never trailed after building a 14-point lead in the second quarter.

"It's a really big statement," Onyenwere said.

Especially after last year, when Indiana won 67-65 at UCLA on Jaelynn Penn's 3-pointer.

When Indiana (10-2) rallied to a one-possession deficit, Onyenwere responded. Onyenwere was 11 of 20 from the field and grabbed 11 rebounds. UCLA had a 49-44 edge on the boards.

Senior guard Japreece Dean, one of three senior returnees from a team that reached the Elite Eight last year, scored a season-high 24 points for the Bruins.

It's the first time in Indiana women's basketball history that two top-12 teams have met on the Hoosiers' home floor.

"We can guard their offense for the first 25 seconds, it was just the second-half opportunities that they would get," said Indiana's Brenna Wise, referring to UCLA's 18 offensive rebounds. "We had to keep them off the boards."

The Hoosiers, who advanced to the NCAA tournament's second round last year and have only one senior regular, managed just one double-digit scorer as freshman Mackenzie Holmes scored 13.

Indiana made just 20 of 58 shots (34.5 percent), and also missed 10 foul shots in 24 attempts. UCLA shot just 24 of 72 (33.3 percent) from the floor.

BIG PICTURE

Despite dropping to 2-2 against Top-25 teams, the Hoosiers expect to benefit come tourney time from playing a tougher schedule. The Hoosiers knocked off No. 5 South Carolina 71-57, lost to No. 2 Baylor 77-62 and won 58-45 at No. 21 Miami.

MISERY IN OHIO

Browns, Bengals end woeful seasons together

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI — Yet another dismal season of professional football in Ohio concludes within the state's borders — a most appropriate finish for two franchise with more big questions down the road.

The Browns (6-9) and Bengals (1-14) get together at Paul Brown Stadium on Sunday in what will likely be a final "Battle of Ohio" for some of the main participants.

"I understand the possibility of it," said Andy Dalton, finishing up his nine-year reign as the Bengals' franchise quarterback.

He's not alone on the cusp of change.

The Browns make the trek to the southern edge of the state with a head coach unsure whether he'll survive a first season that's been utterly disappointing. Cleveland was a chic Super Bowl pick after Baker Mayfield had an impressive rookie season and Odell Beckham Jr. joined the receiving group.

Mayfield regressed behind a struggling offensive line, and an injured Beckham made more news for his expensive watch than his touchdown catches. The team's 2-6 start sparked talk that Freddie Kitchens could be one-and-done.

Heading into the final game, he hadn't talked to ownership or the front office about his future.

"I have not gotten anything but total support from those guys," Kitchens said. "They want me doing my job, and that is what I am trying to do on an everyday basis."

And then there's the Bengals.

Oh, those Bengals.

Owner Mike Brown finally pulled the plug on coach Marvin Lewis after 16 seasons and hired Zac Taylor in a break from the team's past. The Bengals then plunged into a season that's been as bad as any in their 52-year history.

With only one win, Taylor's team will rank as one of their worst all time. The Bengals will pick first in the draft, giving them a chance to take Joe Burrow or another quarterback who will supplant Dalton.

For some, Paul Brown Stadium will be the end of the road.

DALTON'S FAREWELL

The second-round pick in 2011 took the Bengals to their best moments in the past three decades, leading them to the playoffs in each of his first five seasons. He set numerous club passing records but couldn't get them that elusive playoff win.

Dalton has one year left on his contract, so the Bengals could keep him to mentor a new quarterback through a rookie season. Or they could trade him to a team looking for an experienced quarterback.

Either way, it's his final game as the Bengals' franchise quarterback.

"It's not the end of my career," Dalton said. "Obviously a lot of our lives have been here in Cincinnati. And again, we don't know what's going to happen, I don't know what's going to happen. We're going to have to wait until after the season for all that to get handled."

AND A.J., TOO?

A.J. Green came into the NFL along with Dalton in the 2011 draft, and he, too, has set numerous club marks. Green is a free agent after the season, leaving his future in Cincinnati uncertain as well.

If there's no agreement on an extension, the Bengals could use their franchise tag to keep him around for one more year to help a rookie quarterback get settled. But Green says he won't participate in offseason activities if that's the case, a way of forcing the club's hand.

CHUBB AND No. 32

Nick Chubb is closing in on the league's rushing title. He enters the season finale with 1,453 yards, the most by a Cleveland back since the legendary Jim Brown gained 1,863 in just 12 games in 1963. Chubb leads Carolina's Christian McCaffrey by 92 yards and has a chance to clinch the title against a Bengals defense that has struggled against the run.

"I care because everyone else cares," said Chubb, who insists he's not focused on the title.

Linebacker Joe Schobert says it would mean a lot to Chubb's teammates for him to get it.

"Nick's a great guy," Schobert said. "He's a great athlete, a great running back, and he's never going to talk for himself. He's never going to say anything for himself, but it's just a good sense of pride not just for the offense but for the whole team to see him do that because he deserves it."

DECADE OF DESPAIR

The Browns will finish the 2010s without a winning season. They're the only team in the league that didn't win at least eight games once over the past 10 years.

Cleveland hasn't finished with a winning record since going 10-6 in 2007. Since then, the Browns have gone 4-12 and 5-11 three times, won seven games twice, and had a three-year stretch of 3-13, 1-15 and 0-16. Their streak of 17 seasons without a playoff appearance is the longest active one in the league.

DECADES OF DESPAIR

The Bengals wrap up their fourth straight losing season. They haven't won a playoff game since the 1990 season, the fifth-longest streak of postseason futility in the NFL's century-old history. During that 29-year span, they've had only seven winning seasons.

63-year-old man hits milestone in blood donations — 10 gallons

By TYRA BAHANEY
(Logansport) Pharos-Tribune

Each year around the holidays, area blood banks put out the call for much needed blood donations. One local man has been doing his part for years and has hit a milestone in his donations.

Bruce Grable, 63, of Twelve Mile, recently donated his 10th gallon — yes, gallon — of blood.

Grable made 10-gallons his ultimate goal back in 2016 after he hit his 8-gallon milestone.

According to the American Red Cross, one pint of blood can save up to three lives. If that's accurate, then Bruce Grable has helped save roughly 240 people.

"I just thought I'd donate and help people. Help somebody, at least. Save their life," said Grable.

"Every time I start on a new gallon, I just set [my goal] for five more gallons or whatever, two more, three more, whatever," said Grable.

Grable said that 10 gallons may be his limit. He hasn't made a decision whether or not he will continue donating.

"Give me about three or four weeks before I can [donate] again, anyway," he said.

Grable has been donating blood since the late 1970s and has continued to donate blood every 56 days — the allotted amount of time required between donations — as long as his vitals check out okay. Grable said that there have been a few times where his blood pressure has been too high or his iron level has been too low.

"I take an iron supplement pill every now and again," he said. Grable says he recovers after donating blood by drinking plenty of fluids.

Grable said the first time he donated blood, at the United Methodist Church in Twelve Mile, he was nervous.

"But after you get the stick of the needle," he said, "there's nothing to it. It's easy."

Grable has even had people personally thank him for his generous gifts. A while back, a daughter of a man Grable went to school with gave birth. After delivery, she needed a blood transfusion.

"And she came over to thank me [afterwards] for giving blood," he said. "She said my blood keeps her alive. It just makes it worthwhile. There's people that can't give blood. So if you're capable, do it."

According to the Logansport area Indiana Blood Center Representative Megan Borgmann, people may only donate six times a year.

"Another cool fact is that, as a blood center here in Indiana, we have to collect 650 units every day just to supply the local hospitals," said Borgmann.

American Red Cross is urging eligible donors to give the gift of life during this season of giving to help ensure patients don't have to worry about the availability of blood this winter. Blood and platelet donations of all types are needed, especially type O.

Holiday travel and severe winter weather often leads to a decline in blood donations. Blood and platelets are needed every day for those receiving treament for cancer, leukemia, accidents, burns and much more.

As a special thank you for donating, those who give blood or platelets with the Red Cross now through Jan. 5 will receive a long-sleeved Red Cross t-shirt while supplies last. To schedule an appointment to donate, download the free Red Cross Blood Donor App, call 1-800-733-2767, go to RedCrossBlood.org or enable the Blood Donor Skill on any Alexa Echo device.

Upcoming blood donation opportunities include:

Dec. 30, 2019 from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. — Madison Fitness at 1321 Clifty Drive in Madison, Indiana

Dec. 30, 2019 from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. — Walmart at 2380 N. State Highway 3 in North Vernon, Indiana

BRIDGE

WHO WOULD FIND THE DIFFICULT DEFENSE?

Niels Bohr, who won the Nobel Prize in physics in 1922 and was part of the British mission for the Manhattan Project, popularized the Danish quip, "Prediction is very difficult, especially about the future."

The killing defense in this deal would be very difficult to find at the table. How can East-West defeat four spades after West leads the heart king?

East made a two-spade Michaels Cue-Bid, showing at least 5-5 in hearts and either minor. West wondered about going to the five-level, but was dissuaded by the unfavorable vulnerability. (Note that five hearts doubled costs 500 if North-South take one spade, two clubs and a diamond ruff.)

West paused to analyze the deal after the dummy came down. Assuming East was 5-5 in the red suits, presumably South's hand distribution was 7-2-0-4 (or maybe 6-2-0-5). If so, declarer would want to ruff clubs on the board (unless he had the club king and queen).

Trusting his reading of the deal, West shifted to a trump at trick two. Declarer led a club to the ace, and now East played his part, unblocking his queen. Then West won the third round of clubs and played another trump. South had to lose two hearts and two clubs.

Perhaps you thought that East did not need to unblock his club queen, because he could cross to his partner's hand with a heart.

Not so fast! At trick four, declarer leads dummy's diamond queen and discards his remaining heart, which cuts the defense's communications.

Respecting boundaries at church from fellow members

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: There is an elderly man who attends daily Mass at my church. He insists on hugging many of the women after Mass as they leave the church. He is a nice man, and I don't think he's up to anything creepy. I think he's probably a throwback to the '70s when "hugging" was a big thing in churches in particular.

I, on the other hand, do not like hugging people I hardly know. I feel strongly that 1) physical displays of affection should be reserved for people you are friendly with (e.g., family, close friends, etc.) and 2) if a person says, "I prefer not to hug," that should settle it. I'm not saying this man has ulterior motives; I just would like for my boundaries to be accepted.

I have told this man politely but in no uncertain terms, "I am not a hugger." I have put out my hand to shake his hand before he can go in for the hug, but he insists on brushing my hand aside and hugging me anyway. It's as if he thinks he's going to "cure" me of whatever he thinks is my problem. This has been an ongoing problem for several years. I have tried staying in my pew and praying until he leaves, but he often hovers not far off until I depart. Sometimes he has even come over and interrupted my prayer to solicit that "hug."

I am not a mean person. I sometimes just give in and give this man a hug. I am never unkind. Yet I know he takes it personally that I am not eager to greet him with a hug every time I see him. As for why he is so needy, I really don't know. I know he is married and has four adult children and several grandchildren, so I presume he isn't lonely. He seems to get plenty of hugs from the other women at church.

I should add that I am married and in my 60s. My husband and I have a happy marriage and great intimacy. I am affectionate with all my kids — including plenty of hugging, especially with my grandchildren. I wind up leaving Mass feeling guilty for having to insist on boundaries with this man. — Not a Hugger

Dear Not a Hugger: This man needs to learn to take "no, thanks" for an answer. No matter his intentions, it's inappropriate for him to insist on hugging you after you've told him that you'd rather he not. And it makes my jaw drop that he would interrupt your prayers to do this.

The next time he moves in for a hug when you've extended your hand for a handshake, don't feel bad backing away and taking all the space you need. If he feels embarrassed, that's his own fault. You are not being rude. He is being disrespectful.

Dear Annie: Regarding the letter from "Grandma Blindsided by Mental Health Issue," about living with a person with obsessive-compulsive disorder, please recommend NAMI, National Alliance on Mental Illness. I am on the board of NAMI Spokane. I got involved because our adult son has OCD and depression. NAMI has many affiliates throughout the United States. We offer classes and support groups for both families and those with mental illness. All programs are free. Most of these programs are funded through memberships, donations and grants. — Gretchen M. in Spokane, WA

Dear Gretchen: NAMI is a great organization, and I'm happy to print your recommendation here. In addition to visiting the website, nami.org, those in need can call the NAMI helpline at 800-950-6264. Thank you for writing.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Annie Lane's debut book — featuring favorite columns on love, friendship, family and etiquette — is available as a paperback and e-book. Go to http://www.creatorspublishing.com for more information.
